

OpenTheo

Natural Law and Scriptural Authority Davenant Hall Course

September 9, 2021

Alastair Roberts

Brad Littlejohn and I will be teaching a course on Natural Law and Scriptural Authority in the forthcoming Davenant Hall Fall Term. If you are interested, please consider signing up for the course here: <https://davenantinstitute.org/product/natural-law-and-scriptural-authority-2/>. Davenant Hall also has many other exciting course offerings. Take a look at them here: <https://davenantinstitute.org/davenant-hall>.

Transcript

The Fall 2021 Davenant Hall Term is about to begin. Once again, Brad Littlejohn and I will be teaching our course on Natural Law and Scriptural Authority. In 10 weeks, in two hours each week, we'll be exploring the relationship between the two books in which God has revealed himself, the books of nature and of scripture.

In conversation with the tradition, with figures like Aquinas, Hemingson, Hooker, and Calvin, we'll be thinking about the relationship between these things, the way in which it can encourage us to engage with our world and with scripture more deeply. We'll be looking at scripture itself in depth, thinking about the way that scripture itself describes its role and the way in which it reveals God and his truth to us. Registration for this course closes very soon.

If you would like to join us, please consider registering for the course on the site that I have linked below. It closes on the 10th of September. God bless, and hopefully see some of you in the next few weeks.